Women's Day is celebrated annually on the eighth of March to commemorate the cultural, political, and socio-economic achievements of women. It also brings to light the rights of women such as gender equality and violence against women.

We have so many women around the world who inspire us to achieve things far beyond the capacity of men. Some of these women are Marie Curie, Amelia Earhart, Indira Gandhi, Princess Diana, Emma Watson, Kalpana Chawla, Malala Yousufzai and many more.

These women taught us to be proud of who we are, to not be afraid of being ourselves before others and to be strong inside-out. Women are those who empower this world and all women should be given equal rights as men. All women should be inspired to take up challenges and to make sure they prove to the world that we can achieve difficult goals and overcome their obstacles.

Women stand at the front lines of the COVID-19 crisis, as health care workers, care-givers, innovators, community organizers and as some of the most exemplary and effective national leaders in combating the pandemic. The crisis has highlighted both the centrality of their contributions and the disproportionate burdens that women carry. This year, the theme for International Women's Day (8 March), "Women in leadership: Achieving an equal future in a COVID-19 world," celebrates the tremendous efforts by women and girls around the world in shaping a more equal future and recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic and highlights the gaps that remain.

Finally, kudos to the women who are shaping our lives and being the backbone of our achievements, our wonderful teachers. A very happy Women's Day to all of you, words cannot express how grateful we are for everything you have done for us. We love you all so very much!

HUNGAMA – FAMILY ACAPELLA COMPETITION – 13th Feb 2021

Music in any form is loved by one and all, be it young or old. Music created through the age-old musical instruments has always been the norm. Is it possible to create music through any other instruments other than the age-old musical ones?

Well, parents of our tiny tots proved that it is definitely possible and brought out some beautiful rhythms from innovatively thought-of instruments created out of objects around the house. Beats from the mouth, drum effect from steel and aluminum vessels, beats from boxes filled with beads, pearls, stones, earrings and even made the string effect from rubber bands around a box. The list is inexhaustible!

The family band created great music of never heard before notes using simple innovations resulting in rhythmic creations.

VIRTUAL SPORTS DAY – 15th Feb 2021

Sports day conducted on a virtual platform was a novel experience indeed. Enthusiastic parents encouraged their equally enthusiastic children to participate in the various events in their respective level. Recordings of children doing cartwheels, somersaults, dribbling the ball, hopping, balancing, skipping, skating, yoga, froggy jumping etc poured in numbers that even the judges had a hard time in selecting the winners. It was truly a tough competition for the children and an even tougher selection process for the judges. The grit and grace of all the mummies and the strength of all the daddies were tested in the Tu-Tu main-main event, which had the mummies doing the plank and the daddies doing push-ups for one minute. Not to be left out of the fun, the teachers had their fair share of fun in the Triple Trouble event, wherein they had to dribble a ball for one minute, do the plank and skip, in recurrent sequence without a break. T'was truly, a Sports day in a different light!

2,000 years old terracotta Drainage pipelines in Keeladi excavation

We have found terracotta pipes connecting storage jars and furnaces which may be used for some chemical processing, drainage pipes, biggest ring wells with 22 rings. The Tamil civilization existed here should have been one of the most advanced and urbanized civilization - Archaeologist Amarnath Ramakrishna

KEELADI CIVILIZATION: According to a recent excavation study, there is a report of a civilization being found in Tamil Nadu, named Keeladi. This civilization is as old as the Harappan civilization. It is located at a distance of 13 km from Madurai in the Sivagangai district. This excavation was led by Amarnath Ramakrishna. Keeladi findings include bones of different animals- cow/ox, buffalo, sheep, goat, nilgai, blackbuck, wild boar and peacock. Carbon samples from Keeladi had been sent to the Beta Analytic Lab in Miami, Florida, for carbon dating. The scripts found at Keeladi shows a remarkable similarity with the scripts that were found in Indus civilization. The graffiti drawings in Keeladi dates back to 580 BCE and it closely resembles the Indus script. Archaeology department had identified nearly 293 Sangam Age towns along the course of river Vaigai. The Sangam period or age, or the third Sangam period, is a period of history of ancient Tamil Nadu. This is one of the unforgettable discoveries made by the archaeology department and it's a matter of pride for every Indian. It is rightly believed that India is a land of mysteries.

SOMESHWARA TEMPLE: Someshwara Temple is located in Ulsoor, Bangalore. It is one of the oldest temples in the city dating back to the Chola period. It is dedicated to the Hindu god, Shiva. Major additions or modifications were made during the late Vijayanagara Empire period under the rule of Hiriyappa Kempe Gowda. It is believed that Ulsoor was known as Halasuru and was gifted to the founder of Bangalore city, Kempegowda by the Vijayanagara empire. A recent excavation has also revealed that the temple had a tank which is approximately 1200 years old. There is a statue of Nandi (holy cow) facing the deity and it is believed that if one says their problem or their wish in the ears of Nandi, the path towards that particular goal gets easier. Thousands of people all around the world visit this temple especially during Mahashivratri. The main reason behind writing an article on this incredible temple is that I live nearby, and I feel really blessed to have a religious place right in my lane. I feel really calm when I sit in the temple. When I take the first spoon of the prasadam given in the temple during festivals, I feel so delighted. This is definitely a must-visit temple when one travels to Bangalore.

The Sweetest Surprise

Rahul jumped out of bed at midnight. He was really excited and immediately, shook his brother to wake him up. It was their mother's birthday. The two brothers had planned a surprise breakfast for her. Rahul knew his parents wake up early and hence, to surprise them, they had to get up before dawn and start the preparations.

First, they decided to decorate the dining area with some balloons. Rahul took out some balloons and glued them to the wall with some adhesive. He also attached some long curly ribbons to enhance the look. Meanwhile, Rohan, his brother, plucked some flowers from their garden to make a bouquet.

Now that the decorations were done, they were left with the cooking. They had planned to make pancakes, their mother's favourite dish served with a cup of coffee. They were extra careful as everything had to be done quietly. There was very little time left, so they hurried. Rohan started making the pancakes while Rahul made coffee. Both were working together in absolute co-ordination. The breakfast looked amazingly delicious.

They placed it on the dining table, sprayed some room freshener and set the table.

They opened the door and entered their parents' room to find that their mother was not there. Their father explained to them that their mother's friend had met with an accident. Hence, she had left immediately to the hospital and would return in a couple of days.

On hearing this, the boys were disheartened and narrated their plan to their father. He was very proud of his children. They thought that it was better not to disturb their mother by calling her as she was in the hospital.

The boys were really sad that their plan had failed. With no choice left, they ate the breakfast and removed the decorations. The day was almost over. To their surprise, in the evening, their mother arrived. "It was a small accident. Neeta is fine now and she is on bed rest," she said.

The brothers kept quiet. They wished her a happy birthday and went to bed.

They got up early the next morning and decorated the entire room again. On seeing this, the mother had tears in her eyes and was overwhelmed to witness her children's love for her. She hugged them and they spent their day in immense joy.

Seeing Is Believing

It was a chilly night. My parents had gone out to attend my sister's concert. I was alone at home. I was walking to the kitchen to get myself a glass of water when all of a sudden, I could hear a low screeching noise behind me. The voice was frightening and the voice seemed to grow louder and louder. I could feel the cool breeze blow over my neck. I was petrified. I assured myself that I was alone and that the voice might have come from outside. However, I could still hear the voice behind me and the voice had a sad, moaning tone this time.

I walked with a quick pace to enter my room. I summoned up my courage and turned around to see what it was. As I turned, I saw something move. It seemed to be transparent with only a milky white outline. I quickened my pace only to find it do the same. The voices seemed to be echoing in my ear. It seemed like a deadly winter night though it was a warm summer one. I felt the cold breeze blow towards me every now and then. As soon as I reached my room, I locked the door. I felt somewhat relieved on not seeing the figure. Unfortunately, that lasted only for a few seconds. I could see the white figure drifting in the air. I thought I was hallucinating. I was wrong. This time, I could hear my name being called in a low, frightening voice. I felt a chill run down my spine.

I rummaged in the drawer for my phone. I called my parents but their phones were switched off. As I sat beside my window, I could see that it was pitch dark outside. I tried to call out for help, only to hear my voice echo several times. I felt droplets of sweat trickle down my cheeks. The white figure was moving around my room and examining it. I took a few pictures of it.

I could hear the click of the door lock and it opened. My parents had come! As soon as they came, the figure vanished. I narrated the entire incident to them. They laughed joyously and told me to not watch horror movies. But I was sure that I had seen it. I showed them the pictures. Surprisingly, no figure was seen in them.

The next time my parents went out, I decided to stay back and find out the truth. This time too, I could hear the same noises and visualize the same thing again. I could hear it call my name. Once again, I summoned up my courage and said, "Who are you?". I heard it speak in a friendly voice. It told me that its name was Tina. The ghost seemed to be a friendly one! I wasn't scared anymore. We chatted for a long time. We even played a few games. As soon as my parents returned, she disappeared.

Tina became a good friend of mine. I long for her visits. I am waiting for the next visit of hers!

Honesty: The best policy

Honesty is the best policy- a quote that has been imprinted on our minds since time immemorial. We have come across it in story books and television and it has also been told by our parents, elders and teachers. Honesty is not just about telling the truth. It is telling "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

How many of us adhere to this definition of honesty? Let us be honest. We all lie. Whether it is a lie of omission, a little lie, a big lie; it doesn't matter. Most of us do so only occasionally and yet most of us consider ourselves honest.

What makes lying so convenient, that we all do it, even if in only minor ways? Well, most of us lie, to protect ourselves from suffering painful consequences, shame, embarrassment or conflict. We also lie to protect our image or get what we want.

Some of us might argue that in certain circumstances, it is actually better to lie than to say the truth, but whatever benefit we may obtain from lying, even if it is to protect someone else, it is better to remember that honesty is a better policy. Despite its temptation, ease of use and false promises, lying gets us nowhere in the end. We stay right in our own tracks or much worse, go backwards. Behind every lie that we say, there is a character flaw that we need to get rid of.

Let us discuss why honesty is given so much importance. There are so many advantages of being a truthful person, subtle or otherwise. Honesty stimulates us to go all-out and be all the good things that lying prevents us from being. A calm and stress-free life will unfold if we avoid any action that needs a lie to cover it up. This reason alone should be a strong inspiration to not lie.

We also need to understand that trust and honesty go hand in hand. Trust cannot be developed without honesty. People will put their trust and faith in us, only if they know that we are honest with them.

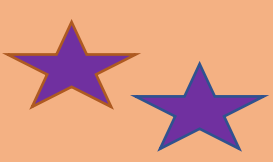

All of us know the story of the little boy who cried, "Wolf!" over and over again when the wolf was actually not there. What followed? When he actually needed help, he was all alone because he had lost people's trust. This could be the consequence that we may have to face for being dishonest. People may find excuses for not helping us if we ask them for something.

Now visualize an environment which we have created, where others know that they can always rely on us. Wouldn't we become a reliable and dependable resource? People who really value the importance of hearing the truth will come to us for opinions and guidance as they know that we will speak the truth, no matter how painful it is. Hence, we would be able to help them self-reflect and self-improve. On the other hand, people who are only looking for opportunities to inflate their ego will quickly learn that we will not flatter them with lies. In any area of life, if we are sincerely concerned with refining ourselves, we need the truth and not flattery!

In conclusion, honesty is being real with ourselves and others, about who we are and projecting our real and honest self to the world. Honesty upholds sincerity, allows and empowers us to show consistency in presenting the facts. Honesty hones our insight and allows us to observe everything around us with precision and transparency. Thus, it is rightfully called the best policy!
