FACTS – Wonder Why?

1. How far is it to the moon?

The moon is 238,900 miles away from earth. The journey would take almost three weeks in a jumbo jet. If you walked, it would take seven years

2. Does a giraffe have a voice?

Yes. But for such a big animal, a giraffe has a very soft voice. Mostly they grunt or bleat. Females moo quietly when they are hungry, or when they are looking after their babies.

3. What is toothpaste made of?

Toothpaste contains chalk powder to polish teeth. Foamy detergent in the toothpaste cleans teeth and the chemical fluoride keeps teeth strong. Toothpaste also consists of flavoured oils for taste, disinfectants to kill germs, and seaweed gel that binds all the ingredients together.

4. What are caves made of?

Caves are hollows in the ground. They can be large chambers far below the surface, or just holes in the sides of hills or cliffs. Some caves are made by rainwater trickling through cracks in the rocks. Some are worn away by seawater.

5. Why do cakes rise when they bake?

A cook mixes a teaspoonful or more of baking powder into the cake mixture. When the cake is baked in the oven, the heat causes the baking powder to make tiny bubbles of carbon dioxide inside the cake. The bubbles then expand making the cake rise.

6. What are the waves?

Waves are formed when winds blow over a moving body of water. If a gentle wind blows, the water will move slowly. If the wind is strong and blustery, large waves will swirl and crash against the shore.

7. What is an echo?

An echo is the 'instant replay' of a sound. When sound hits a surface nearby, it bounces off so quickly that you do not get a chance to hear it. An echo can be heard when sound takes some time to travel back. In open areas like mountains and hills, or large empty rooms, echoes can be clearly heard.

Lakshanya N II B

I wrote this poem in March when 7th grade (the previous academic year) ended so abruptly for me. This poem is addressed to my friends to whom I have expressed my feelings.

Memories of Friendship

It was one full year ago,
 We walked into our class.
 Happy, always with friends,
 Or at least that's what we thought.
 Slowly as time went by,
 We gradually stopped being shy.
 And what followed was
 The best year of my life!
 Yeah, we had our ups and downs
 That made it a crazy rollercoaster ride.
 But just like our Wonderla trip,
 We always got back with a greater bond.
 Our Annual Day, that December
 Feels like yesterday, I still remember
 Our hilarious jokes, ceaseless laughter, and fun
 Oh, together, all the naughty things we've done!
 The long breaks quickly past
 Our free periods too never did last!
 Of my best memories, you've all been apart
 But, as they say, 'All good things fall apart'.
 Now that it's all over
 What can I say?
 I am doing my best
 To keep my tears at bay.
 TIME FLIES,
 MEMORIES DON'T.
 EVEN IF WE GET SEPARATED,
 OUR LOVE WON'T!

Journal Writing

Fill your paper with the breathings of your heart - William Wordsworth.

In the journal you do not just express yourself more openly than you could to any person, you create yourself. The journal is a vehicle for your sense of selfhood, it represents you as emotionally and spiritually independent. It's never too late to get started with a journal and when you go through a time in life when things are changing or you want to make changes there is no better place to start than with journaling.

It can be an exciting time to write down your daily progress on how your life is floating, it helps you to be focused and to get mindful about what is going on inside your head. It allows you to dig down real deep into your mind and put those feelings down into words. Journal writing is a skill in itself that asks for commitment, practice, and honesty. It is also a perfect practice for creative people.

As journaling has many educational and emotional benefits, a topic is shared every Friday through the Edumerge portal. Students are encouraged to write on the topic and share their work. The best pieces will be published in NHT every month.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK: My strongest emotion at the moment is ----- because ----.

The Fear of Covid-19

My strongest emotion at the moment is fear. The fear that one mistake of mine can cost a loved one's life. One trivial mistake, and I might have to live with the fact that I am the reason for someone being lost into the dark ocean of abyss.

I know it's cliché, but right now I feel like a bird trapped in a cage. I am just waiting for the day when I shall become stronger than the cage that has confined me for a little too long.

I long to soar outside fearlessly; hug my near and dear ones, and tell them how much I miss them. I wish all this had never happened.

The desolation caused by a microscopic non-living thing, in a world, where we think we are higher and mightier than everything else shows what a joke we are to nature's inconceivable superiority.

That is the scariest part.

Hameanansu

Honestly, my emotions have changed my view of the world. They have made me a much stronger and confident person. My strongest emotion? A homogeneous fusion of happiness, melancholy, anxiety, anger, and surprise. I could call it 'Hameanansu' which is formed using the first two letters from my list of emotions. This sounds like a Chinese word. So, I have to conjure up another name. Surely later, I will come up with a unique name to describe my emotion. It would be closely associated with the gravity of the current situation.

Anxiety? Now, stepping out of the house is an expedition unknown because its outcome could mean either survival or .... A month ago, the mere sight of a honey bee would make me jump a mile, but now, seeing a person cough would be my worst nightmare for another fortnight.

Anger? A few weeks ago, I was angry with the virus for destroying world peace. Now, I realize how pointless it was that few irresponsible citizens of the world should feel my wrath.

Happiness and melancholy? Devastating news daily, makes my heart bleed. When the news channels decide to take a break and report the news of people recovering, I feel optimistic and hopeful.

With the number of co-vid cases increasing, the time I can spend outdoors has greatly reduced. But, how much fun can you have at home entertaining yourself with the same thing over and over again? And, as long as I am confined within four walls, boredom is definite. Still, the biggest question remains. Could I wake up tomorrow morning and hear about the disappearance of the virus? I am waiting to be greatly surprised!

Worry and Fear in Lockdown

My strongest emotion at the moment is 'WORRY & FEAR' because of the current pandemic 'COVID-19'. It all started in CHINA in Wuhan's wet market by the end of 2019. It was the place of origin of the infection. Spreading rapidly, the infection has engulfed and infected millions of people across the globe. There is a danger to everyone's life if we do not take the required precautions. Today, stepping out of the house even to buy essentials, going for a job, or meeting friends is like risking our lives. There is no vaccine discovered yet for this dreadful disease and the count of infected people is just increasing daily. I constantly worry and fear about this never-ending phase.

School life! ... yes, my school, teachers, friends, and the fun which we used to have along with studies, are missed deeply by me these days. All those days seem like a dream when we used to walk and breathe freely without a mask. We never bothered about sanitisation and mingled with friends and relatives without caring about social distancing. These days social distancing is a must in our day-to-day life.

I sincerely pray to Almighty God to eradicate this COVID-19 overnight, and make this world a free, happy and safe and place for all of us to live in.

Our Wired Thoughts

During class today, my teacher asked me to present something on a topic, we had been working on. Just when I agreed, I heard a classmate complain about extra work and that someone else could do it.

I didn't mind not working on it, but I began to think whether I was too involved in class, and did not give my friends a chance to prove themselves. It could also be an inbuilt human trait that I failed to realize myself.

Are we all wired to be selfish to get the best for ourselves? Are we all trying to go that extra mile today for an easier tomorrow? Are we all wired to keep ourselves so busy that we don't have time to look in the mirror and see what we have become? These are the questions that keep my mind occupied.

Aadya Raj

I felt a strong bond developing between my family members. We spent time doing household chores like cleaning and cooking together. We spent time playing board games, singing, reading, dancing, walking on the terrace and even watching TV.

We also made regular video calls to my grandparents and even played games through calls. We gave food and essentials to the needy, and hope as well.

My strongest emotion is 'Hope'. I feel bonded emotionally with my loved ones. I am positive and hopeful that things will become better!

Our Hope amid Darkness

The world is facing a multitude of problems right now. This statement very briefly explains the current situation. Being at home for so long has given me some time to think. After all that introspection, my strongest emotion is a combination of 'happiness' and 'sadness'.

Every day the number of infected people just keeps getting higher and higher, and as it is proceeding now, the end is not even in sight. This pandemic has caused so much instability both economically and socially, that our governments are scrambling to find solutions. Most of the industries that keep the economy of our country afloat are struggling to stay above the water themselves. All the people who earn their livelihood on a day-to-day basis rather than monthly, have found themselves with no means to buy food, they need to survive.

The most important thing we can do right now is to stay indoors and stay as positive as we can. There is always a light at the end of the tunnel no matter how far away it seems. The people of our nation have risen to this challenge by helping out in as many ways they can. The 'co-vid warriors' continue to perform their noble tasks every day. Various organizations and volunteers are trying to help families in need. These people are the source of inspiration to others. They are like the lone candle flames in the ever-growing darkness around.

To those reading this, please remember, 'Stay safe and stay positive'.

Nihal Vedapalli

Gratitude in Covid Times

My strongest emotion now is 'fear' because of the worldwide COVID-19 pandemic, which has affected every person in the world. I am thankful to God for keeping all my family members and me safe in this current situation. I express my deep gratitude towards all the health and public service workers, including doctors, nurses, policemen, security guards, delivery men, and other health staff members. I am grateful also to the schools for trying their best to keep us, students, safe during this unprecedented time.

This is a difficult time for me as I am missing my school, my classroom, and my friends. I like playing in the park, but now I have to spend my time indoors. Most of all, I miss my outings. I miss shopping, eating at restaurants, and watching movies in the mall.

I am experiencing a bundle of emotions in this current situation. I wish all of this gets over quickly, and everything is back to normal once again. Only then will 'HAPPINESS' be our strongest emotion.

Anagha Gopakumar

Our Healing Environment

My strongest emotion at the moment is 'Hope', as the Earth has been healing itself during the lockdown.

The world has come to a sudden standstill in the lockdown just like a clock when its battery is drained out. The factories are closed. All vehicles are standing still, and no honking can be heard around the world, right now.

Every morning, I used to wake up to the unpleasant sound of honking vehicles, which caused my frequent headaches. Now, I wake up to the calming sounds of birds chirping.

Life's come to a standstill. There is no hustle-bustle around. There is no rush to catch the bus which contributes to atmospheric and noise pollution. We are now breathing fresh air and have time to watch the clouds. Most people are exercising at home. In return, nature is healing.

Lately, peacocks were seen in a jungle of urban buildings. Pumas were spotted on the streets of a city. A deer was observed exploring the subway of Japan. The water has become crystal-clear in the canals of Venice. Some people also witnessed ducks and swans paddling in the canals.

Bangalore has almost reached the peak of its glory which means that there is a lot of greenery. We must not start polluting it again. Earlier, my father used to check areas of heavy traffic on his mobile. Now, he relaxes before his work and jogs with my brother in the morning.

People are sighting rare visitors like bulbuls. Visitors like parrots, bulbuls, red-tailed hawks, weaver birds, and white pigeons have enthralled children and grown-ups, in various urban areas.

Lush greenery surrounds our apartment. Several flowers like the rose and hibiscus are blossoming in different colours like pink, yellow and white. Inspired by nature, many of my friends have taken up photography as a hobby. World Environment Day was surely celebrated ideally, this year.

Jayant Patwari

Missing School Days

My online classes for the day have just got over and my strongest emotion right now is ... 'sadness'?? Yes, sadness.

School life is not the same anymore. We are studying and practicing various skills at home.

At school, we sit in a classroom and learn without distractions. We also meet and chat with our friends. Many games are enjoyed together with friends. We usually have a pen, a book or basketball in our hands. It is a place where our mind is never free and swirls with ideas, formulas, equations, scores, and fantasies.

I love school! Who doesn't? Some students prefer sports to studies. Many like reading books, while art and craft activities provide most students with pleasure and happiness.

I am filled with sadness for the people who are suffering due to the pandemic. Sadness fills my heart for people who are struggling financially. I empathize with students like me who are stuck within the four walls of their houses. There is a feeling of fear and sadness because of this deadly virus.

Now, I would like to conclude with four words which you must have heard countless times over the past few months. Nevertheless, I reiterate them, 'Stay home, stay safe'.

SRUTHI R

Family Bonding in Covid Times

'Physically apart, emotionally bonded and full of hope', that is how I am feeling at the moment. Due to the pandemic, we have been mainly at home during the last four months. I was not able to meet or spend time with relatives and friends or even meet my teachers. Do I feel lonely and sad? No, as a family we are united and bonded. Surely, we will get through this.

I felt a strong bond developing between my family members. We spent time doing household chores like cleaning and cooking together. We spent time playing board games, singing, reading, dancing, walking on the terrace and even watching TV.

We also made regular video calls to my grandparents and even played games through calls. We gave food and essentials to the needy, and hope as well.

My strongest emotion is 'Hope'. I feel bonded emotionally with my loved ones. I am positive and hopeful that things will become better!

Transition to Online Classes during Lockdown

My strongest emotion at the moment is 'confusion' because I went from relaxing, eating ice cream and playing games, to online classes. This is a period of transition that I still need to get accustomed to.

Many students deal with the transition to the busy school life from the laid-back lifestyle of summer vacations. However, the transition was harder this year because our summer vacation had prolonged due to the ongoing pandemic. We got used to the melancholic life during the quarantine. The sudden transition to online classes took time.

Ironically, the start of this school year was quite a welcome one. We learned our first lesson that it was INDEED possible to get bored of playing games all day.

Online classes provide a platform for learning. Despite the fact of not being able to interact with our friends and teachers, we can enjoy school life all the same. Through perseverance, we can brave this challenge and emerge stronger.

Prahlad Kini

'ON CLOUD NINE' WITH ONLINE CLASSES

My strongest emotion at this moment is 'happiness'. I am immensely happy right now. The reason is our class teacher's message regarding 'online classes' which will be resuming soon! I love online classes and am glad that they will start once again. I can continue learning new topics without getting bored.

A balanced life is necessary for a student. Online classes like dance, music, art, and craft are very interesting. Virtual classes help me gain knowledge and improve my skills. I can chat with friends during my spare time and have lots of fun. There is positive engagement with my classmates, friends and teachers.

Since my parents are working, they have limited time to impart structured academic knowledge to me. I am now happy that I will receive the same through online classes.

I feel proud of my school for resuming online classes. At this moment, I promise to work hard, grab the best from virtual classes, and be an outstanding performer in the current academic year.

PAPIHA

The Anticipated Cure

My strongest emotion is 'fear' of the Covid-19 pandemic. I am fearful of this and have no idea about what is going to happen in future. Since December 2019, the situation worldwide has worsened. I am scared that this situation is going to keep increasing. I feel sorry for the families who have lost their dear ones.

On the contrary, I also believe that one day this is going to end, and a vaccine will be available to cure the world of this pandemic. By God's grace, I am happy that my family and friends are all safe till now.

Swasti Chavan

Lockdown in the US

My strongest emotion at the moment is 'anxiety' and 'contentment' because of the COVID-19.

Covid-19 is the first pandemic my generation is facing. It has left the entire world struggling to cope with and find a vaccine for it. Anxiety during such times is obvious as there is no certainty.

I am quite anxious for everything to reopen and have some fun outside. Being in the US which has maximum Covid-19 cases during this time has been quite a challenge. I wanted to travel and explore but all my plans crashed due to the pandemic.

As there are two sides to a coin, I am happy to have got enough time with my family and close friends. I have started to work on my math skills with my father which is fun. I love playing with my baby brother. This has made up for all the lost time when we were all busy and could not spend so much time together.

I have also picked up some new hobbies like baking and gymnastics. There are two bakers I follow on YouTube, who inspire me to learn and try new things. Now, I can bake cakes. I can do cartwheels and handstands too pretty well.

Well, now in California the number of cases is reducing. Some hikes and other outdoor activities are opening up. So, I think this is going to be a really fun summer. I hope that soon the whole world gets back to normal, and I can get back to Bangalore and start attending my school. Staying positive!
